

It has come to my attention that FCC desires to negate the NJ "do not call" laws because they are more strict than federal ones.

We in our STATE should be able to create laws that are more protective of us than the federal laws -- federal laws should provide only a MINIMUM BASELINE for citizen protection. Seems to me this has been upheld in many, many other areas -- why should telephone solicitation be different?

FCC should concern itself with assuring BETTER SERVICE to our citizens, and not with impairing protections that state legislatures provide.
